Dr. Robert Brooks

Tuesday, March 16, 2010

National/international public speaker on motivation, resilience, self-esteem and family relationships, co-author of Raising Resilient Children, Raising a Self-Disciplined Child, and Understanding and Managing Children's Classroom Behavior, among many others.

RAISING AND TEACHING RESILIENT CHILDREN & ADOLESCENTS

Dr. Brooks will describe factors that help children and adolescents deal more effectively with stress and pressure to increase resilience. He will discuss the importance of empathy and identifying and reinforcing "islands of competence" as well as specific strategies for nurturing self-discipline, self-esteem, responsibility, caring, hope, and resilience in our children.

Tere Bowen-Irish OTR/L

Wednesday, April 7, 2010

An occupational therapist in pediatrics and psychiatry primarily in school systems and private practice. She is a certified Life Coach and Yogakids facilitator, author of The Drive Thru Menu Series for classroom to promote attention, relaxation and stress reduction.

TEACHING THEM WHERE THEY LEARN

Ms. Bowen-Irish will explore ways to use Gardner's theory of Multiple Intelligences to focus on ability versus disability. Learn how to promote development, gross, fine, visual perceptual, literacy and math skills for every type of intelligence.

Dr. Ross Greene

Tuesday, April 13, 2010

Associate Clinical Professor, Department of Psychiatry, Harvard Medical School, author of The Explosive Child and Lost in School.

COLLABORATIVE PROBLEM SOLVING (CPS)

Dr. Greene will describe his approach to working with kids with social, emotional and behavioral challenges called CPS. Rather than viewing these kids as willful, coercive, manipulative, and attention-seeking, he (and research in the neurosciences) suggests that such kids lack crucial cognitive skills. He will discuss ways to identify lagging skills and to start working collaboratively to help them solve the problems giving rise to their challenging behavior.

Suggested donation: $20.00 for each event or $45.00 for the series with pre-registration.
